CITY SCHOOL TEACHER LIST IS RELEASED

Leadership Meet Of P.T.A. Here Closes Today

The Kentucky Congress of Parents and Teachers ended its eighth Annual Leadership Conference today with approximately 300 persons in attendance. Those attending agreed that it was one of the most successful ever conducted. The conference was held at Murray State College.

Mrs. C. B. McClaren, president of the congress, presided with most members of the PTA state board present.

Workshops were held for each member of the PTA board in order to help incoming officers carry out the functions of their office better during the coming school year.

A series of programs were designed and with the aid of guest speakers and participation of parents and teachers, a fruitful session was held.

Good leadership in all phases of the educational field is most important this year because the decisions and lessons taught, affect so many young citizens, a spokesman for the PTA said.

Mrs. Harvey Britton, membership chairman for the state, announced that the goal for 1963-64 is 220,000 PTA members for the state as a whole.

A number of local persons were involved in the three day annual meeting. Dr. Ralph Woods welcomed the group to Murray and M. O. Wreather made a short talk on the opening morning.

An original skit "Who Killed the High School PTA", written and moderated by Mrs. Charles Mason Baker was given Tuesday. Participants were Mrs. N. B. Ellis, Mrs. Charles Clark, Mrs. Jim Ed Duguid, Mrs. Ed Frank Kirk and Mrs. William Wall.

A symposium on the "dropout question" was held with Dr. Marvin Dodson, executive secretary of the KEE, Fred Schultz of Murray, Senator George Overby of Murray, Miss Ann Wreather, and Mrs. Dan Hutson, all of Murray participating.

Mrs. William Wall, president of the First District PTA, was active throughout the three day meeting, participating in the pre-school workshop and the high school service workshop.

Mrs. Nell Miss Lillian Tate, Mrs. Wreather and Dr. Woods also served on the leadership committee for the direction of the short course in leadership.

This morning Mrs. Willis VanHorn evaluated the course and made the closing remarks. District presidents presented certificates of awards to clubs and members.

The benefit of the child was stressed as the end product of the efforts of teachers and parents and a close cooperation to achieve that result was pointed out.

"Quality education," says the president of the nation's PTAs, depends on closer working partnership of parents and teachers, with parents taking an interest not only in what the schools teach, but in how they teach it.

"More and more we have come to realize that quality education—the watchword of our time—depends upon quality home-school cooperation. Or to put it another way, the upgrading of academic standards depends on the upgrading of parent-teacher relations."

This trend is continuing since the educational level of parents is being raised, closing the intellectual gap between parents and teachers. Parents also are not only informed about the schools but are genuinely desirous of excellence in education and the teaching profession.

Republicans In New Show Of Unity

By RAYMOND LAHR
United Press International
MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Republican governors have emerged from the national governors' conference with a new show of unity but braced for a party-tending contest over the 1964 presidential nomination.

From the start of the conference Sunday until adjournment Wednesday, the Republicans kept the sizeable Democratic majority on the defense on the civil rights issue—an issue barred by gentlemen's agreement until two years ago from the annual meeting of state executives.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York led the GOP assault against the Democrats on that issue this week and convinced all Republicans and Democrats here that he already was an active candidate for the 1964 presidential nomination.

On all the key votes, the Republicans gave an unusual display of unity. Rockefeller and his allies were joined by GOP governors unfriendly toward him and leaning toward Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona for the presidential nomination.

Drive Begins Sunday
The unity drive began Sunday when GOP National Chairman William E. Miller met with the Republicans present to organize a party caucus. The caucus then met daily with Gov. Mark Hatfield of Oregon as temporary chairman.

The more formal-sounding "Republican Governors' Association" was set up Wednesday with Gov. Robert E. Smylie of Idaho, now in his third four-year term, as chairman.

"It was announced that the new association would meet periodically for the purpose of establishing concerted action" with GOP congressional leaders and the Republican National Committee.

While Rockefeller was monopolizing attention, there was no sure feeling about how much good he had done for his political cause. But there was a unanimous feeling that he had decided to go for broke in contesting Goldwater or any other potential rival for the presidential nomination.

Rail Strike Is Averted

By DANIEL RAPOPORT

United Press International
WASHINGTON (UPI) — A nationwide rail strike, threatened for Tuesday, was averted today when the railroads agreed to a congressional request and postponed implementation of their new work rules for at least 30 days.

Daniel P. Loomis, president of the Association of American Railroads, announced to a crowded hearing room of the House Commerce Committee that the carriers had agreed to the postponement "in order to cooperate with Congress."

The chairman of the House and Senate commerce committees had asked for the delay to give Congress time to act on President Kennedy's plan to turn over to the Interstate Commerce Commission ICC the long-smoldering work rules dispute.

Post Notices
The deadline for putting the new work rules into effect had been 12:01 a.m. Tuesday. Several railroads already had posted notices informing their employees of the scheduled changes.

Rail unions said the imposition of the rules, abolishing thousands of jobs, would signal the start of a nationwide strike.

Loomis said: "In response to the requests of the chairmen of the House and Senate committees and in order to cooperate with the Congress of the United States, the American railroads have agreed to a 30-day extension to 12:01 a.m. Aug. 29, 1963."

Rep. Owen Harris, D-Ark., chairman of the House Commerce Committee, praised the railroads' decision and said it was one which was made "in the entire public interest of the United States."

1,000 Gallon Still Found In Trigg

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. (UPI) — Two young western Kentucky men were to be arraigned in U.S. District Court here today in connection with a Wednesday night raid on a "moonshine" still in Trigg County.

Four federal tax unit agents raided the 1,100-gallon capacity still near Cannon, Ky., on the Cumberland River, and arrested Charles K. Knight, 21, of Golden Pond, and Bobby Ingram, 27, of Princeton.

The agents said the two men, who were loading whiskey into the back of a car, made no attempt to resist.

The still was smashed, 24 fermenters were destroyed and the agents confiscated the car and 50 gallons of moonshine.

Knight and Ingram were lodged in the Christian County jail overnight.

One Of Six Who Escaped, Gives Up

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Billy Joe Rivers, 23, today became the second of six Negro escapees from the Christian County jail to surrender voluntarily.

Rivers, accompanied by his father, C. K. Rivers, gave himself up at the jail this morning. Herman Poindester, 24, surrendered voluntarily early Wednesday.

Commonwealth's Detective George Batts said Rivers told him he had been sent back into town to obtain weapons for the four escapees still at large. He said his father persuaded him to surrender however.

Police had warned the elder Rivers to hold his son if he returned or bring him back to jail.

Rivers faced possible September grand jury action on charges of breaking and entering.

Still at large are Major D. Walton, 31, Otis Matlock, 24, Charles Green, 18, and Charles Cross, 21, all of Hopkinsville.

The six escaped late Tuesday by sawing out of their common cell with hacksaw blades.

Press Is Hit By Nunn As Charges Made

LOUISVILLE (UPI) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Louie B. Nunn Wednesday scored the Louisville newspapers and called for a federal investigation into bootlegging activities in Gov. Bert Combs' home county of Floyd.

At a news conference here, the former Barren County judge announced he had written to Agriculture Secretary Orville Freeman asking for an investigation "to determine to what extent federal relief funds are being used for the purchase of illegal whiskey."

The GOP candidate quoted from a Lexington newspaper article earlier this month which said in part: "According to several sources, the Floyd County bootleggers will accept food stamps from those on relief."

He asked that "this deplorable situation" be investigated by Freeman's department.

Nunn spent much of his time assailing the Louisville newspapers for their treatment of the Floyd County bootlegging situation.

He claimed that the Louisville newspapers, when they finally published the story, presented it "so as to give the impression that Combs was vigorously crusading against the bootleggers in his home county."

Nunn charged that the Louisville Courier-Journal editors had "deliberately buried, butchered, distorted, and falsified versions" of a press release by him that had presented these points he wanted to make about the situation:

—That the bootlegging in Floyd County has become "significantly more extensive" since Combs took office.

—That the Alcohol Beverage Control Board "has not enforced the law in Combs' county for the past three and a half years."

—That the people of Floyd County "feared reprisal" if they spoke out about the bootlegging.

—That local citizens have formed secretly a committee of 100 which they hope will become strong enough to wipe out "the syndicate" in Floyd County.

—That the first major raid in the county since Combs became governor was "made only this month after an extensively investigation had begun and exposure was apparent."

—And, that Edward T. Breathitt Jr., the Democratic gubernatorial nominee who has the backing of the Combs' administration "has been in a position to speak out and has failed to do so."

The Republican gubernatorial candidate charged that "the bootleggers strongly supported my opponent during the primary and after estimating Breathitt's primary campaign expense 'between $2 million and $3 million,' asked: 'How much of the Breathitt campaign money came from this source?'"

Partial Test Ban Treaty Is Reached By Three Big Powers

By HENRY SHAPIRO
United Press International

MOSCOW (UPI) — The United States, Britain and the Soviet Union today initiated a partial nuclear test ban treaty.

The action dramatically set the stage for a possible breakthrough on a wide range of cold war problems.

Initialing of the treaty was the first formal, substantial agreement between East and West since the Austrian pact was signed eight years ago.

The nuclear treaty was initiated at Spiridonovka Palace by W. Averell Harriman for the United States, Lord Hailsham for Britain, and Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko for the Soviet Union.

It places a ban on tests in the atmosphere, in outer space and under water, but it does not ban underground nuclear experiments.

The treaty, which still must be approved by the U.S. Senate and the British Parliament, was agreed upon after five frustrating years of sometimes bitter nuclear negotiations.

Coming as it does while the Soviet quarrel with Communist China has reached its most bitter point, the partial treaty already has given both Western and Communist observers a surge of optimism about the future course of East-West relations.

There is talk of a possible summit meeting shortly in Geneva, where Berlin and Germany would be discussed. The question of Berlin stands as one of the focal points of East-West friction.

The present treaty does not include a provision for banning underground nuclear tests because of the Soviet refusal to accept what the West considers adequate inspection to prevent cheating. The West demands at least seven annual on-site inspections, while the Russians earlier this year said they would not go beyond two or three.

The treaty broke a five year deadlock between East and West over halting atomic tests.

The initialing was done by Gromyko, Harriman and Lord Hailsham in private. Newsmen were admitted to the conference room only after it had taken place.

The treaty was initiated in triplicate.

The Picture With The Los Angeles Dodgers Today Is Far Different Than One Year Ago

By FRED DOWN

UPI Sports Writer

What a difference a year makes! Just one year ago today the Los Angeles Dodgers were rolling out in front of the National League pennant race just as they are now with a seven-game lead. The pennant was being conceded to them because no one realized that Sandy Koufax was out for the remainder of the season and Don Drysdale would soon begin to feel the effects of his absence.

Today the picture appears the same—but actually it's vastly different. The Dodgers are out in front seven games, all right, but this time the two key men—Koufax and Drysdale—are gaining momentum rather than losing it. Koufax stands 16-3 with nine straight victories and Drysdale, rather than beginning to lose strength, appears to be gaining.

The 6-foot, 6-inch, 230-pound side-wheeler, feared by all National League hitters, gained his 13th victory of the season Wednesday night with a five-hit, 5-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates. He is the first pitcher in the major leagues to reach 200 innings pitched for the season and he says, "I'm stronger at this point of the season than I've ever been."

A Winning Trio

Koufax, Drysdale and Johnny Podres 10-6 have scored 39 victories among them and with 63 games left to play in the season shape up as one of those rare pitching triumvirates that can total 60 or more victories in a campaign. Drysdale struck out eight and walked only one in cruising to his 13th win behind a seven-hit attack that included two hits each by Jim Gilliam and Johnny Roseboro. Earl Francis, tagged for the five runs in 4-2 thirds innings, suffered his fifth defeat against three wins.

The San Francisco Giants shamed the New York Mets, 4-3, the Milwaukee Braves, downed the St. Louis Cardinals, 8-1, the Chicago Cubs edged the Cincinnati Reds, 2-1, and the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the Houston Colts, 8-3, in other NL action.

Double Downs Mets

Jim Davenport's two-run ninth-inning double was the winning blow for the Giants and extended the Mets' league road-record losing streak to 18 straight games. Billy Hoelt, the beneficiary of the Giants' three-run outburst, picked up his second win while Al Jackson, who allowed only three hits and two earned runs, suffered his 12 defeat against six wins.

Denny LeMaster pitched a five-hitter to win his sixth game for the Braves, whose 11-hit attack featured homers by Deke McKenzie and Frank Bolling. Hank Aaron and Lee Maye also contributed two hits to the Braves' attack as Ernie Broglio suffered his seventh loss against 10 wins.

Dick Ellsworth, en route to becoming the Cubs' first 20-game winner since Hank Wyse in 1945, pitched a four four-hitter against the Reds for his 14th victory against seven defeats. Douglas by Lou Brock and Ellis Burton drove in Ellsworth and Brock in the seventh inning with the runs that handed Bob Purkey his sixth loss against four triumphs.

Jack Baldschun's two-hit shut-out relief pitching for 2 1/2 innings closed out Cal McLish's 10th win of the season for the Phillies. Ken Johnson suffered his 14th loss for the Colts despite three hits by Bob Aspromonte.

Murray Legion Team To Meet Paducah, Championship Title

Murray's American Legion baseball team meets Paducah tonight at Brooks Stadium in Paducah, 6:00 p.m. in the finals of the district tournament. If Murray wins this game, a second game will be played immediately following. If Paducah wins the first game, they will win the championship in the double-elimination tournament. The winner advances to the Western Sectional tournament in Campbellsville this weekend.

The lineup for tonight's action resulted from Paducah's 5-0 defeat of Murray last night, and Murray's subsequent 3-1 victory over Clinton. In the opening game last night Murray's Mitch Gibbs with the shaky support gave up five runs in the first two innings, and although Don Faughn, who relieved Gibbs in the third, held Paducah scoreless the rest of the way, Murray was never able to mount a serious attack on Paducah's Charlie Brown. Murray came back in the second game to rally in the ninth inning for the victory over Clinton, with Roger Fields for Murray and Copeland for Clinton locked in a tight pitching duel.

Paducah ..... 230 000 000-5 9 1
Murray ..... 000 000 000-0 7 5
Brown and Lee; Gibbs, Faughn (3) and Smith
Murray ..... 000 000 003-3 7 4
Clinton ..... 000 000 001-1 5 4
Fields and Smith; Copeland and Canty.

The status of the tournament reached this point last night after some initial confusion. Confusion resulted when Harry A.

Green, Jr. of Mayfield Post 26 protested the eligibility of four players from Graves County listed on the Murray roster. After Murray defeated Hardin in the opening game 4-0, Manager J. L. Hicks of Hardin protested the result and the game was declared forfeited to Hardin. Manager Lable Veal of Murray then protested the eligibility of one player from Calloway County on the Hardin team, whose roster also included two players from Graves County. This protest was eventually upheld and the Murray-Hardin game declared no contest.

Meanwhile, releases were obtained for the Graves County members of the Murray team, thus restoring their eligibility. Murray was then scheduled to re-play Hardin last night and was leading 5-2, when the decision to start play anew was made. Because the tournament is a double elimination affair, some irregularities in second round play had resulted from the initial game rhabarb, and the fresh start was voted by majority of the managers of teams participating. All players involved in the controversy have been restored, and the tournament is supposed to proceed without further controversy.

Background for the presence of the Graves County players on the Murray squad was that Mayfield did not field a team last year and did not organize one this year until Murray had played eight games and had established its roster with the four players included.

Two of the four players were listed on Murray's last year squad, and all had asked to be permitted to play with Murray and wanted to continue even after organization of the Mayfield team.

Murray's 15-3 record is the best of the teams in the Paducah tournament, and Murray, Paducah, and Benton are considered to be the strongest teams. Murray has a perfect record against teams participating in the tournament, having defeated both Paducah and Benton in previous meetings.

Everything Rosy For Yankees; Why Not For Whitey Ford?

By FRED DOWN

UPI Sports Writer

Anything seems possible for the New York Yankees these days, so why can't Whitey Ford go on to equal the American League record of 16 straight victories and join the 200-win club before the season is over?

The 34-year-old left-hander is approaching both goals with a string of 12 consecutive triumphs that have increased his career total of victories to 167. His season record is 16-3 and the way the Yankees support him it looks like he can go on winning forever.

Ford has gone nine innings only five times in those 12 straight victories but the Yankees have supported him with excellent late-inning relief help and what's more important, run—lots of 'em. They haven't scored less than three runs in any of the 12 games and have totaled 67 for an average of 5.6 runs per game.

Shout those figures at Roger Craig, the luckless New York Met pitcher who has lost 15 in a row and 17 in all, and he'll tell you in a few thousand words why it's great to be a Yankee.

TV CAMEOS: Shirl Conway

Actress Reveals Why Performers 'Retire'

Attractive Shirl Conway (right), in the role of head nurse Liz Thorpe on CBS' "The Nurses," listens as guest star Elizabeth Ashley vents a grievance.

By ED MISEUR

ABOUT a year or so ago, rumor had it that attractive Shirl Conway had retired.

In fact, when she accepted the part of Liz Thorpe, R.N., on CBS-TV's "The Nurses," network publicists sent out releases stating that she was coming "out of retirement" to portray one of the running leads in one of TV's most important series of the season.

The point came up recently when I went to see Shirl at the studio in upper Manhattan where the weekly video show is filmed. Her answer was a throaty laugh and quick reply. "Retired? Me? That's far from the truth. Whenever anyone in our profession who isn't doddering days they've retired it just means there ain't nothin' for us to do."

THE TALL ACTRESS (about six feet in heels), who believes in speaking frankly, went on to explain. "I know—because after I returned from playing 'Auntie Mame' in Australia in 1960, I found the going rough. I was told I was 'cold,' period. I just couldn't get any work for a year."

With time on her hands, Shirl paid a visit to her brother in Michigan. On a train coming back from Detroit to New York, she met engineer Gordon Larson. "It was a good, old-fashioned pickup," she said, her eyes twinkling merrily. "We were married shortly after and we settled down in a remodeled farmhouse on 28 acres near Padi, Pa."

Shirl, lended to her household and gardening chores for a while. Then a call came for a one-shot role in "Route 66," which was filming an episode in Carlisle, Pa., near her home. Not long after, in late 1961, came another call for a small part in "Gideon's Potties," a segment of "The Defenders."

"I PLAYED one of the ex-wives of a murdered playboy," said Shirl. "It was a role completely different from my present one, but apparently something clicked in the mind of executive producer Herbert Brodwin and stayed there. Some months later he called me at the farmhouse and asked me to play the head nurse in the pilot film of 'The Nurses.'"

"He said that no one else had been tested and added that he felt the role was made to order for me. Among other things, the money was good. So I talked it over with my husband and then accepted."

Before taking on her present role, Shirl had an extensive background in show business. A native of Franklinville, N.Y., she graduated from the Uni-

Fashions Run In Cycles, Modern Next

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fashions in home furnishings like fashions in women's clothes run in cycles and the next major change in decorating could well be "right back to stark modern," says the new president of the American Institute of Interior Designers A.I.D.

Mary E. Dunn hopes however her look into the future of home decor may have some errors in it. "We're at the peak of the revival of traditional furnishings," she said in an interview. "We might go right back to stark modern. But to me, the ideal is a combination of things we love from the past combined with the functional of the present."

"I think in terms of modern lighting, combined with modern paintings, and some fine old furnishings — say rare chairs from the Louis XVI period in France and oriental lacquered pieces. I have nothing against period furniture being copied either."

Old Hat

"Pure traditional is just too old hat," said Miss Dunn. "I believe in the old and new combined subtly."

I don't like one cut off from the other. "Certainly home furnishings run in cycles of style as fashion does. Keep a dress around long enough and it comes back in style."

We asked her why decorating had returned to what those in the trade often call "the elegant look."

"We're at home more these days," she said. "Home has taken on a whole new meaning. We're living in dangerous times... there's this urge to huddle around the warm, safe center."

Miss Dunn is a petite woman with blonde hair, sparkling blue-gray eyes, and a number of years in decorating she can't disclose. She is president and major stockholder of Nancy McClelland Inc., a firm established in 1923 and named for its owner, now deceased.

Miss Dunn, a native of New York City, joined the firm while she still was a student at Hunter College. She went on with night classes to finish her studies at Hunter and then attended the New York School of Interior Decorator.

Heads Organization

As president of A.I.D. she heads a professional organization with 35 chapters and nearly 3,500 members. Today, she said, homes have become less of a showcase, more of a comfortable family setting.

"Only a very few of the newly rich now buy a background," she said.

She thought Mrs. John F. Kennedy's efforts to restore period furnishings in the White House had also been a factor in making traditional decor popular.

Miss Dunn's firm, although doing general decorating for private homes, offices and hotels, specializes in wallpapers. Miss McClelland in 1924 wrote a "bible" of the wallpaper art called "Historic Wallpapers," portraying in writing and sketches the paper's usage throughout the centuries.

ACCESSORIES—The 39th National Housewares Exhibit in Chicago comes up with this dust mop for the housewife who needs everything. Among the accessories are a steering wheel, horn, bell, siren, turn signals, mirror, radio, pencil sharpener, headlight, etc., etc. That's Mrs. Jane O'Connor there, with someone that looks much like Mrs. Papler Macha.

Law Seen For Irresponsible Motorists

Frankfort.—The Financially Irresponsible Motorist in Kentucky, a study released recently by the Legislative Research Commission, prepares the way for legislation on the uninsured motorist by the 1964 General Assembly. L. R. C. completed the study at the request of the 1962 Legislature.

The report suggests seven approaches to the problem, ranging from compulsory insurance to use of a central fund which would pay damages to all injured parties regardless of who was at fault.

On the same subject, Insurance Commissioner J. Elliott Flannery commented that his department plans to recommend to the Legislature that it enact a law requiring all insurance companies to include uninsured-motorist coverage in their auto liability policies.

Automatic inclusion of the coverage would cost policyholders from $4 to $8 more per year, Flannery said, but policyholders could waive the coverage and extra cost if they desired.

At present, Flannery added, uninsured-motorist coverage is available from all auto liability companies operating in the state, but it is not automatically a part of the policy.

Flannery said that past studies of financial irresponsible motorists indicate about 30 per cent of Kentucky's motorists are uninsured.

She Deserves Credit

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: How can you call a woman with a pre-fabricated family a "mother in the highest form"? That was an insult to true motherhood. What does a woman who has adopted four children know about the joy of first learning that she is to bear a child? What does she know about the beauty of carrying a child under her heart? What does she know about the thrill of a child's first cry? What does she know about the fulfillment of actually giving life?

MOTHER OF FIVE
DEAR MOTHER: Perhaps she knows nothing of the "joy, the beauty, the thrill and the fulfillment" you mention. But don't you think that the woman who asks for the measles, mumps, heartaches, risks, sacrifices and the challenges of rearing a child, with none of the attending blessings of bearing her own, is deserving of special praise? I do.

DEAR ABBY: We have been happily married for one year, and my problem is my wife, when I am driving, I have driven over 350,000 safe, accident-free miles in the last nine years. My wife, on the other hand, is a relatively inexperienced driver. However, while I'm driving she is constantly slamming on imaginary brakes and suddenly shouts warnings such as, "Watch out," "Be careful," etc. I have come very close to having accidents due to her comments and actions. How can I teach her to have more confidence in my driving?

ALMOST SMASHED
DEAR ABBY: Unless your wife is given to hallucinations, her comments and actions are an indication that you are not the careful driver you think you are. Be extra careful in the future, and see how relaxed and full of confidence your wife becomes.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a magician and the best in the business. How can I get a job.

MAGICIAN
DEAR MAGICIAN: YOU'RE a magician, and you're asking ME?

DEAR ABBY: I wonder if "Discarded with younger women" is complaining or bragging. She said she raised 14 children without a washing machine. Well, I'd complain. I don't think younger women are lazier. I think they're smarter. After all, MEN manage to provide themselves with all the tools THEY need to make THEIR work easier.

The Amazing Mrs. Bonaparte

BY HARNETT T. KANE

From the novel published by Doubleday & Co., Inc. Copyright © 1963 by Harnett T. Kane. Distributed by King Features Syndicate.

CAT OF THE CATS. Betsy Patterson, a Baltimore girl, is coming to Murray, Ky., to see her father, who she thought was a dead man. William Patterson—Betsy's father—was a merchant seaman who worked his way into a fortune as a merchant seaman.

DORCAS PATTERSON—William's high-born American wife, who is subservient to her husband's rigid notion of the lives of their 12 children.

Jerome Bonaparte — Napoleon's nephew via a French warship—arrived in the West Indies in 1815 for the impending war with England.

Determined to meet the handsome Jerome Bonaparte, Betsy wangled an invitation to the party where Bonaparte was to be a guest. Her father's merchant ship was wrecked and she took Betsy to the party and sent her to the Patterson country place. But Betsy arrived early the next morning and rode a mile to attend a ball in honor of Jerome.

CHAPTER 9
WELL before four o'clock, the time set for Jerome Bonaparte's visit, Betsy Patterson entered the parlor in a gown selected after much thought and the discarding of several others—a pale blue tulle with a high, tight waist and a suggestion of sleeves, which did not conceal her white shoulders.

Before the mirror she had loosened her hair, pulled it up lightly, and loosened it again. From the garden Sadie brought in jars of late roses as Dorcas Patterson readjusted a line of paintings on the wall, and Betsy's eyes on the clock. Surely Mr. Patterson would not be late that day?

Eventually Betsy and Dorcas heard the creak of a carriage and from the window they watched William Patterson, almost scowling, as he hurried into the house.

Another roll of wheels, and two vehicles stopped. Steps sounded up the outer stairs and with a perceptible flourish the butler swung open the front door. Moving forward, Mr. Patterson welcomed the French party awkwardly but with a pleasant enough manner.

In a moment they were meeting Jerome's entourage. "Monsieur Le Camus, my secretary since Santo Domingo," Dark-haired, pale-skinned, Monsieur Le Camus had the look of a man who suffered from stomach trouble, Betsy said to herself. He bowed distantly, appeared to be giving a cold appraisal to her smallest gesture, and returned, completely silent. Her impression was distinctly bad.

"And Dr. Garnier of Paris, who has been with me for some time," Jerome brought forward a smiling, stocky individual, whose gaze ranged continually around the room. About Dr. Garnier, Betsy would have to make up her mind at a later date. Meanwhile Jerome had stopped before Dorcas. "Ah, the mother of our beautiful Elisa." As he pressed his lips to her hand, Dorcas did not conceal her delight.

When the wine arrived, Napoleon's brother held up his glass. "To the finest possessions of my household, to Madame Bonaparte, and to Dorcas. Although such words were a poverty to him, the older man joined silently in the toast. Then Jerome faced Mrs. Patterson. "I congratulate you, madame, on the loveless and, not less, the character of your daughter."

Here was a side of young Bonaparte that Betsy had not expected; his manners, his good will were having their effect. Dr. Garnier approached her and Monsieur Le Camus joined them, while Jerome sat with William Patterson. When the two Frenchmen addressed her and Dorcas, Betsy listened to bits of the other conversation, especially Jerome's lively words:

"That kind of sail can be handled the most easily..." "Ah, yes, at Port-au-Prince there's often been such a profit—up to three hundred per cent in a year." She discovered now fine a listener Napoleon's brother could be as, with his encouragement, Mr. Patterson launched into a description of some of his own ventures. "It was a gamble, and I put all my assets into it..."

Differential yet not fawning, Jerome was making an impression on William Patterson. At that point Betsy heard Le Camus clear his throat, and Jerome got up.

"We must leave now, sadly. But I hope we may have the happiness of meeting again, all of us, before the week is over." Quietly William Patterson nodded, and Betsy knew that their guest had scored. "As a matter of fact," Jerome added casually, "I trust I may secure Madame Bonaparte and the family to the party at Monsieur and Madame Catons on Thursday?" Betsy admired his tact; he would take her and the Pattersons.

"Why, yes, thank you," Mr. Patterson's voice was low but clear, and Betsy hoped that her face did not reveal her full elation. Closing the door after the guests, Dorcas turned to the family. "You see, the young man has a fine head on his shoulders." Unconsciously the others looked toward the father, and Betsy nodded.

ON THE night of the Catons' party three carriages arrived, and by the time they had all been distributed, she found herself and Jerome in one of the rear seats, with Le Camus ahead of them. After a time the Lieutenant's arms encircled her and again his lips touched her throat and mouth. Catching her breath, Betsy whispered, "Please, we aren't alone."

"It's only Le Camus," Jerome replied. Though the other man must have heard, he gave no sign.

"I still don't like it," she snapped. With a shrug Jerome settled back, and the rest of the ride passed in silence.

At the entrance of the Catons' house Jerome helped her down, and only then did he speak again. Tightening his grip upon her arm, he whispered fervently, "Elisa, be careful, it is so hard to stay aloof when everything inside he calls to you." As the family approached he told her, "Give me all the dances to-night."

"I did," she pointed out, "we could never be together again like this."

Soon the Pattersons discovered themselves a part of Jerome's little court, with dowagers and their daughters clustering around them. Betsy and Jerome had a third of the dances together; she insisted he seek out others, although this was more nearly a process of allowing himself to be sought. But as she moved across the floor with her partners, she had difficulty in listening to them. In spite of her effort, her own gaze followed him, and when their glances met, she forgot everything except Jerome.

All at once Elizabeth Patterson realized that she was failing completely in love. Perhaps she was foolish; perhaps she should withdraw before it was too late. . . . He looked up, gave her a warm greeting, and the blood rushed to her cheeks. Now she made no effort to hide the glow of happiness that ran through her.

In time she was drinking punch with him at the end of a dance when he murmured nervously, "Elisa, the place is open in the garden. Let's go out, please, for just a small while."

In the shadow they sat in brief silence. She heard the intake of his breath, and he drew her against him with such force that it took away her own breath. His head dropped, and he was kissing her gently, then fervently. . . . Another couple approached, and as she pulled away he groaned, "Will we never be alone in this country?"

The ball was ending, and reluctantly they started back into the house. On the way Jerome fretted like a petulant boy. "It may be a whole week before we meet again. I can't wait!"

"I'm afraid," she flared back at him, "there's nothing we can do about that."

"There may be something," he said the words as if to himself, and she did not remember them until later that night, after her father knocked at her door. In the furries of good-bys, she and Jerome had had only a few minutes together, and he had been curiously silent. Now William Patterson told her, "Bonaparte asked if he could call tomorrow—on me."

"That's fine," She stretched and yawned. "I'm glad you two are getting along."

"But did he say anything to you about this?"

"No. I'm sure, though, you'll find things to talk about."

Settling back, Betsy prepared to savor again the events of the night. About to say more, her father hesitated, and left her.

(To Be Continued Tomorrow)

BRIDGEWORK PRESERVED—The last nine covered bridges in Illinois, including this one out of the past over Marys River near Chester, will be preserved if Gov. VICTIMS OF FREIGHTERS' COLLISION—Bodies of some of the crewmen who died when their British freighter Tritonica sank following a collision with another freighter on the St. Lawrence River near Quebec City, Que., are brought ashore aboard another vessel. The collision occurred in a heavy fog.
